

Finishing product

■ What is a «finishing product» ?

- Finishing product is a thin layer that is put on the garment in order to improve, for instance, its appearance.
- Generally finishing products are used when a new garment is created.

Important : daily constraints as you wear the cloth and successive cleanings tend to eliminate this initial finishing and the garment loses its nice hanging and support.

■ Why using «finishing product» on garments ?

- Finishing product treatment gives the garment its initial appearance and support while preserving its softness. It is particularly efficient on natural fibres such as linen or cotton.

If you are used to travel by train or plane, or if quite simply you are often in your car, it allows to reduce creasing considerably .

- The parts which are usually creased such as the back or behind the knees on trousers or again back of jackets keep a clean appearance much longer.
- The duration of the ironed effect is reinforced.
- “Finishing” treatment also brightens up your articles’ color (example silk scarf). The result will be more significant on dark colors such as black or navy blue.
